

after his death, dwells on his 'sweetness of temper 5 id generosity of feeling'; and more than y half a centi
 later his grandson still affectionately ie remembered
 'kind good-natured man who was in the ig habit of giv me presents when his wife was away.'
 Far differ it were Lord Beaconsfield's recollections 1-of his gra:
 inother: 'a demon,' as he described her to Lord Row >1, in his grandiose way, 'only equalled by Sarah Duch 53
 of Marlborough, Frances Ann [Marchioness of L< idonderry], and perhaps Catherine of Russia.'

She lived till 1825, -when she died, aged 82, d and was bur in "Willesden Church, where her monument is is
 is. She -\ informally a Protestant at the time of her death. ie She ca
 to stay with my father and mother at ir Hyde House n Chesham. in the year 1825, and was kind and suave to f ::
 upon seeing which I recollect that my mother 1, remark 'Depend upon it she is going to die.' I remember w h horror the journeys on Sundays from 'e Bloomsbury Squ; to Kensington when I was a boy. No public conveyanc 3,
 no kindness, no tea, no tips — nothing.